

Office Moves

If your planning an office move Support IT will appraise your present operations to plan a relocation strategy. It is vital that when critical systems are being moved it is done with the utmost skill and planning. Increased downtime on IT systems can cause major issues. If a business suffers any difficulties whilst moving its technology or if it is wrongly installed at the new site this can cause major disruptions.

The relocation of critical IT systems must be managed correctly to avoid any unnecessary and avoidable problems occurring. We can decommission your servers from their existing location and re-commission them at your new server room.

When it comes to desktop computer equipment we will disconnect and reconnect it for complete peace of mind. Additionally, we can provide a total solution of organising the cabling infrastructure, software configuration and the hardware installation.

Support IT will work as part of the relocation team, so that you don't have additional contractors to manage on site during the move. They will also work alongside your team to fulfil the relocation of your IT, telecom and peripherals.

Our technicians are qualified IT industry professionals, certified with current MCSE, MCSA qualifications as well as being registered resellers of Dell and HP products to name but a few.

As with all IT relocations, individual component parts are disconnected and packaged in anti-static protective wrapping, ready for transportation in secure IT cages. All of this is specifically designed for maximum protection of this delicate equipment.

On arrival at your new site, our team can ensure all systems are re-commissioned and tested for network connectivity, enabling your company to commence their work from the first day at your new location.
