

Anti Virus and Spam

The level of virus infection has now reached a scale that major new outbreaks are mentioned on the national news. No organisation is now safe from virus attack, no matter how small. In fact, it has been shown that smaller organisations are now more at risk. This is because larger businesses have started to take the threat very seriously, and are investing thousands of pounds on solutions to ensure that they do not get impacted by viruses.

With an unprotected PC you are highly likely to be infected with a new virus as soon as it breaks. This infection can come from an e-mail attachment or simply by browsing a Web site. You will know little about it until your computers start behaving strangely or stop functioning altogether. By then it is too late and you are infected.

Although it is usually always possible to clear a virus infection from your system, the time taken and the cost incurred can be high. That is why it is better to protect your systems in the first place.

Support IT provides a comprehensive range of anti-virus products that will protect against known and emerging virus infections. From products for small systems, through to sophisticated solutions to protect enterprise networks, our solutions will protect all sizes of organisation.

These solutions will protect your laptops, desktops and servers against virus infection as well as automatically removing viruses when they are detected. They can even keep themselves automatically updated to defend your network against emerging threats.

Spam e-mail is a pain and detrimental to your organisation's productivity. Spam grows by the day and the threat grows with it, be it simply loss of productivity or (more importantly) the security implications which it brings. Spam brings a whole host of security concerns, owing to the potential exploitation of your staff or systems, be it through spyware, dangerous attachments, phishing or plain hoaxes.
